OXFORD HAS LARGEST DELEGATION AT STATE 4-H CLUB CONTEST

The 22d annual State 4-H Club Contest was held at the University of Maine, Dec. 26, 27, and 28, with Kenneth Lovejoy, State Club Leader, and Miss Loana Spearin, Assistant State Club Leader, in charge. The Oxford County delegation had the largest number of representatives of all the counties in the State. Three counties had every county champion present. They were Aroostook, York, and Oxford. County Champions from Oxford County were: Laurence Perry, W. Bethel; Alfred Lovejoy, West Bethel; Chester Wheeler, West Bethel; Mary Stearns, Hanover; Priscilla Thurlow, Buckfield; Thoresa Swan, South Paris; Frances Adams, Hartford; Homer Worden, Canton Point; Roger Stearns, South Paris; George Wright, South Paris, and Keith Holland, South Hiram.

Leaders who attended were: Mrs. Ida Rowe, Locke Mills; Miss Eleanor Yetkovski, Locke Mills; Mrs. Winfield Buok, South Woodstock; Mrs. Frances Merrifield, So. Hiram; Mrs. Frances Pratt, Norway; Harry Brown, Rumford; Arthur Kelleher, Norway; and Jesse Gilpatrick, South Hiram.

OXFORD HIGH HERE FRIDAY

Gould Academy will meet the undefeated Oxford High School team here Friday night in the locals' second league game of the season. The locals are in poor shape as they are just completing a two week Christmas vacation and have had very little practice. Wentzell and Browne having worked in the woods all during the holidays, have not handled a ball for two weeks. Stanley Brown, star guard and center, will not be able to play due to a badly cut leg, inflicted while cutting wood. A few of the others have had some practice, but not sufficient.

The visitors have a strong aggregation with victories over Norway, Livermore Falls, and New Gloucester. They defeated Livermore Falls 39-20 on Livermore's own floor. If the Gould team can make a good showing against this strong league opponent, having such a small amount of practice, they bid fair to do well the rest of the season. The starting lineup will be undecided until the start of the game.

The visiting girls have taken some one sided beatings so the local girls do not seem to have such a tough task before them. However, they are greatly handicapped because a number of their star players will not be back from vacations in time to play. The others are having only one practice in two weeks to prepare for the invaders. Todd of Mexico will officiate.

PARADISE STREET HOUSE DAMAGED BY FIRE

The fire companies were called Wednesday afternoon to a blaze in the house owned by Annie Heath estate on Paradise Street, and occupied by Lester Enman and family. When discovered the fire had destroyed the stairway, but it was possible to save about everything on the ground floor. The furnishings on the second floor were badly damaged by fire and water.

THE COOK'S NOOK

BY HELEN C. RICHAN
Central Maine Power Company
Lewiston, Maine

Before we are one day older let us talk and act on the subject of toasting. Advertisements for tooth paste tell us that gnawing a bone is excellent for the teeth, but that it is not done at the best dinner tables. We may, however, increase our toast consumption and get some real exercise for our teeth and gums without offending any criterion of table manners.

As to toasting appliances, there are all varieties and sizes, from the popular toasting fork to be used over an open fire (indoor or outdoor) and the lowly old fashioned wire toaster which we use on the coal range, to the elaborate electric models, which make two slices of perfect toast that jump out to meet you. And all kinds have their place and degree of usefulness.

We must not overlook the broiler as a toaster, generally considered as a specific medium for cooking meats, but lately broadened to include fruits and vegetables as well as fish, and not to be frowned upon as a means of toasting bread and crackers.

How about some of the food stuffs to which the broiling method of cooking may be applied?

Starting with the so-called "staff of life," we have TOAST—golden brown, crisp on the outside and tender and soft inside, buttery and wholly delicious by itself or with bacon or marmalade.

Croutons—Little golden brown buttery cubes of toast which make an otherwise good soup something to rave about.

Toasted Sandwiches for tea, supper, bridge refreshments or the midnight lunch. What praise a really good one deserves. But don't toast a cold filled sandwich. Toast the buttered sandwich, then open and serve the cold filling as a separate course.

Toast the long frankfurter roll for your salad sandwich. Cut lengthwise through top and crumb, leaving the bottom whole. butter and place on its side in your sandwich toaster (you can accommodate four, usually). Toast to a nice brown, then insert small pieces of lettuce and the desired salad mixture and serve at once.

Toasted Crackers—delicious with butter and jam or cheese spread for any occasion and as an invalid's diet. A cold food practically beyond reproach. The dextrinized starch in the slowly toasted cracker starts the food with one of the digestive processes completed, thus aiding a delicate system.

Ever toasted fruit? Use halves of pears or peaches, or slices of pineapple place on broiler rack with meat, sprinkle lightly with brown sugar, dot with butter and broil 10 minutes.

There's no limit to broiling in meat cookery. I have just heard of a woman who broils her roast of beef because she thinks the flavor superior to that of baked meat.

Try broiling steaks, chops, ham-bone steaks, etc., and you will be wiser. The flavor is finer and it is so easy. Broil meat on one side, salt and turn. Broil fish on one side, cracking slowly enough to cook all the way through. Removing fish to platter will be easier if you put pieces of heavy wax or parchment paper to fit fish and draw out carefully as you place the cooked fish on the serving platter.

A Pyrex or even serve platter is a great thing on which to broil fish, then on cooking at all is necessary. Grease platter generously and salt liberally before putting fish on it.

About our only contest is soup, and I believe it is quite a nice touch to include that for nothing could be sorer than the little earthenware bowls of onion soup sprinkled with grated cheese and broiled under the broiler to a rich bubbly golden brown.

Here is a good supper dish where you will make use of the broiler:

Shepherd's Pie

4 tablespoons butter
4 tablespoons flour
1 1/2 cups milk
2 cups chopped ham
1/2 teaspoon salt
1/2 teaspoon pepper
2 cups hot mashed potato

Method: Melt butter (brown in a bit of onion if desired) add flour, seasonings and milk to make fairly thick white sauce, cooking thoroughly. Add chopped ham. Pour into greased baking dish, cover with well seasoned mashed potatoes to form a crust, and brown lightly under broiler.

COLUMBUS BIRTH PLACE AND BURIAL PLACE UNKNOWN

ALTHOUGH THERE HAVE BEEN MANY CLAIMS FROM VARIOUS LATIN COUNTRIES THAT COLUMBUS WAS BORN IN THEIR TERRITORY, IT HAS BEEN GENERALLY ACCEPTED THAT HE WAS BORN IN NEAR GENOA BUT IT IS NOT KNOWN EXACTLY WHERE. SHORTLY AFTER HIS RETURN FROM HIS LAST VOYAGE COLUMBUS DIED, AND HE WAS BURIED AT WALLADOLID (SPAIN) BUT SOON AFTERWARDS HIS REMAINS WERE MOVED TO THE CATHOLIC MONASTERY OF LAS CUEVAS, SEVILLE, SPAIN. THE BODIES OF COLUMBUS AND HIS SON WERE EXHUMED AND SENT OVERSEAS TO SAN DOMINGO AND INTERRED IN THE CATHEDRAL. IN 1795-96 WHEN THE FRENCH TOOK OVER THE ISLAND THE REMAINS (?) WERE AGAIN MOVED THIS TIME TO HAVANA. A FEW YEARS AGO, THE SUPPOSED BONES WERE MOVED BACK TO SEVILLE, SPAIN BUT NO CONCLUSIVE PROOF THAT THEY WERE THE BONES HAS BEEN UNCOVERED. SO SEVILLE, HAVANA AND SAN DOMINGO MAY ALL LAY CLAIM TO AN UNKNOWN TOMB AND HAVE YET TO DISCOVER WHERE LIES THE REAL BONES OF THE DISCOVERER OF AMERICA.

NEW YEAR'S
and PUBLICITY
by Luella
B. Lyons

"YES, Margie dear, you are looking at half a million geraniums that will be bursting into bloom one of these days and as far as I know, you and I and maybe a few folks here in Boone will see them. No advance orders for them"; and Bob Marchant's face was the picture of woe.

"But you only tried selling them the order in one city, Bob," Margie reminded him.

"Darling, this is New Year's day and a time for making fresh starts."

"It Worked, Bob—My Plan Worked!" She Exclaimed.

I've an idea for getting an order for the whole lot and to Ripley's at that, but don't ask me what—just trust me and hope for the New Year changing our luck, darling!"

That evening Margie spent an hour or so over a letter which she addressed to the "People Say This" department of the Crandall newspaper.

The next day Margie insisted on hanging around the greenhouse until Bob nearly went mad with her persistence. Then a long distance call did come through from the buyer at Ripley Brothers' store.

"Marchant, say, have you still, by any chance, got that prospect of half a million geraniums, and can you be sure to have them ready—on a day we will later specify—in bloom by then? Name your own price."

Bob, happy as a lark, scarcely knew the buyer had broken the connection for Margie was dancing about wildly yelling—"It worked, Bob—my plan worked!"

"Margie darling, I've just had one grand and glorious shock but I'm not fool enough to think I earned it. I know the answer, so spill the first half of the story, honey—quick!"

"Bob dear, I wrote in to that column as though I was some great landscape artist. They published the letter and Ripley's took the suggestion to heart. You see, I said it was a shame that the stores out in this section of the country didn't ape the big stores where I hailed from, decorating every window of their stores with wondrous boxes piled high with gaudy red geraniums through the spring months and summer, too, and with green and red everlasting shrubs the winter through—just like so many do in France. I went into detail even, but that doesn't matter now. They took it to heart, engaged your whole crop just so you and I can take our 'geranium honeymoon'!"

SOME FIGURES DO LIE

For reasons known only to those behind the move, the Securities Commission has been making public the salaries paid to executives of some companies. The announcements failed to show what the executives actually would get out of their apparently huge salaries.

Apparently the SEC. figures found that a man who lived in New York and drew a salary of $200,000 would net only $47,250.
He would pay $47,250 in income taxes to the federal government and $15,750 to New York State. In other words, direct taxes on his income would be about 60%. In addition, he would have the same multitude of indirect taxes on things paid by everybody.

David Lawrence, a famous commentator on the news, carried the calculations a step further. He compared actual cash retained by an individual and the President of the United States both of whom get $200,000 salaries. The President would pay no tax, the other individual would pay $19,000, netting only $180,000.

As long as stockholders think they are getting their money's worth, the government can do nothing about salaries paid to company executives. Lawrence said however that "constitutional restriction is secondary to publicity warfare nowadays, and that's what publication of the salaries amounts to when industry is showing its opposition to New Deal policies."

Apparently one could slightly misquote Port Longfellow and say of the Securities Commission announcements:

"Tell me not in mournful numbers,
For things are NOT what they seem."

HOW'S BUSINESS

Income of automotive workers in 1935 will be nearly 20% higher than last year. The total 1934 payroll was $122,632,669, that for 1935 will be around $141,694,620.

The Federal Reserve Board
last month's index shows business generally, despite the seasonal fall slow down, at 94% of normal in October compared with 85% in May.
The 1935 average is 90.

Production of steel is heading toward a new high since 1929, the more important estimate for January a total of 2,000,000 tons, last year's December wage cost are equal to or above the 1932 level.

Wood sales standard approximate reports were $1,300,000 pounds for the first quarter of 1936 and $1,200,000 for the first three months 1935.

The National Industrial Conference last week found that the value of goods made in the third quarter of 1935 was 2.5% higher than last year.

ECONOMIC HIGHLIGHTS

Bills of Every Individual. National and International Problems, Inseparable from Local Welfare.

Again the United States has come to the end of a year of epochal importance in our history—again our 125,000,000 people enter a new year, with hope and ambition and courage.

During the year just closed industry and agriculture, the only sources of wealth and employment, recovered some of the ground lost
during the worst of depression.
Most industries made progress—
some even came close to the production records attained during 1929. Near the end of 1935, business as a whole reached the highest point since early 1931.

Business commentators are almost unanimous in expecting 1936 to show improvement over 1935.
Even so, business does not feel the jubilation it would normally feel under such circumstances, nor does agriculture. The upturn in business is encouraging—yet there is very little to give a feeling of confidence that we are approaching stability.
While the financial and industrial barometer continues its climb unbiased and far-sighted observers are gravely wondering what the future holds.

Why should this be so during a period that, measured by figures alone, cannot be called other than a period of recovery? There are many answers—but this to put forward a generally before approaching the specific is unquestionably true: Industry is afraid!

It is afraid of governmental policies, principally of federal ones, that seek to negate the spirit, and often the letter of the Constitution.

It is afraid of a spending policy in which the federal government has led and has been followed by many local units of government—that has caused our national debt to reach an all-time high, that has greatly increased taxes, and that must inevitably make still higher taxes necessary.

It is afraid of political programs which, carried to logical conclusions, make it impossible for industry to earn profits. A number of industries have had a taste of this already—they have sold more goods, employed more men, kept more factories in operation, yet have enjoyed no comparable increase in their earnings.

It is afraid of persecution of industry and of measures which in-effect transfer management from the owners and executives of industry to properties to officeholders in Washington, and, to a lesser extent, in state capitals. A notable example of this is the Public Utility Act of 1934, now in the courts, which marks a revolutionary departure from our time-honored concept of the proper relations between industry and government.

Under the terms of this Act, electric companies can be forced out of existence with loss of billions of dollars to their stockholders, at the whim of a commission, and can be federally regulated in every phase of operation. Leaders of other industries, seeing this, know that such a trend, once started, will not be long confined to a single industry, but will be gradually extended to others.

Business is afraid that private initiative and enterprise, foundation stones of the republic, are in danger; that our democratic theory is becoming tinged with alien theories which have sounded the death knell of liberty and freedom in other lands; that even a dictatorship looms on the horizon.

It cannot be disputed that the old status of State's Rights, for example, has been drastically changed—that the federal power has crept steadily into spheres that we used to believe were the sole province of state and local powers.
This, whether we realize it or not,
is the first step toward dictatorship.
Under our Constitutional set-up of government, no dictator could seize absolute power because the seats of power were purposely made many and widespread—one each in the 48 states, and one in Washington. As the powers of states are abrogated or lessened, and as the central power is augmented and strengthened, the opportunity for successfully establishing a dictatorship, whether it bears that name or another is immeasurably improved.

It must not be forgotten that a short time ago a number of men holding responsible positions in government advocated, either directly or by intimation, Constitutional amendments and changes which would have given the federal government unprecedented powers over individuals, over industries, over agriculture, over all the rights and liberties for which our forefathers fought. Less is heard from high sources of such changes now, but the kind of thinking that first advocated them remains.

The fears and uncertainties mentioned here, plus too much politics from all factions are the greatest bars to real recovery, and to permanent stability. America still has her fertile soil—she still has her industries and her factories. She still has the machines which can produce the things that create genuine jobs, and that raise the standard of living of all the people.
She still has the American spirit that faces great obstacles gladly, that approaches the most difficult tasks with jubilation. Let the clouds of doubt be scattered, and we can go no way but forward!

Latest available figures show that 1,705,022 boys and girls were enrolled in 4-H clubs in the United States in 1934. In Maine, 7,494 were enrolled.

AUSTRALIAN BALLOT

Ten months have passed since the town meeting at which it was voted to appoint a committee to recommend some form of Australian ballot for use by the Town of Bethel if it approved of that method of voting. This committee has not yet been convened; largely through fear that their recommendations would incite a more progressive element in town to demand a special town meeting in order that the Australian ballot might be adopted for use at the next election of town officers. It is held that special meetings represent only the opinions of those whose interests are directly affected by the matter in the warrant and that, because every one doesn't take interest enough to attend a special meeting, the vote
there is not the opinion of the town
as a whole.

It would seem for the best interests of all that this committee should meet and make its recommendations early enough that they might receive ample discussion before town meeting. Last minute politics do not lead to a clear vote because they are not well enough understood. With only two months before town meeting the town has a right to expect some action from a committee the town voted to have appointed.

It is not the province of the committee to say whether or not the Australian ballot should be adopted.
Rather is it their duty to recommend the method of its conduct. If it is voted to use this type of ballot, the committee can be expected to recommend:

The physical form of the ballot.
Whether or not any requirement
other than regulated by state statute be made to have a candidate's name put on the ballot.
To set a time limit in which candidates may file nomination papers.

Whether all officers be listed on such a ballot or exceptions made.

The time of opening and closing polls.

The time of the annual meeting.
The number of persons, and how they shall be appointed, to act as ballot clerks, checkers, and ballot counters.

To set a distance from the ballot box within which no political advertising, button-holing, or sticker passing should be allowed.

The committee has lost one of its members, who is wintering in Florida. Probably no act would receive greater commendation from all parties interested than that the Moderator appoint himself to this committee as its chairman and call the committee together at the earliest convenient time.

Apple production the next five years is expected to average slightly less than in the last five years, with moderate improvement in prices to growers.

YOU BIG NEWS OF SCREEN AND RADIO

Interesting news of the latest entertainment fields—pictures and radio—that is Virginia Vale's column, "Star Dust," which appears each week. It would be hard to find a reader not interested in at least these two vital phases of American life. Cognizant of the demand of this immense audience for a source of information, this weekly column by the sparkling and human and authoritative in nature.

VIRGINIA VALE

Movie-Radio Column Appears in This Paper.

Behind the screen and radio is assignment, but Virginia Vale has made herself a star among them when it comes to searching the big stories and fascinating bits that every "listener" and movie-goer wants to know.

Mrs. Vale demonstrates in her column that she is more than a woman who writes about the screen and radio, is merely chatting.

about her friends. She says that she can hardly remember when she did not know the motion picture celebrities; she made her first trip to Hollywood when D. W. Griffith's "The Birth of a Nation" was being filmed, and Mr. Griffith took her about the set and introduced her to the picture's stars, the introductions developing into friendships that still continue.

She was for two years associate editor of a motion picture magazine, then went to a newspaper syndicate to write about the movies, then to the New York Evening World, where she wrote interviews with the stars and did a gossip column called "The Studio Cat." It was at that time that she began meeting the headlines of the radio world.

Her home is the favorite gathering place for the great ones we hear on the air and see on the screen, but she says she hardly knows where she lives, as she commutes between New York and Hollywood so frequently.

She is the author of many fiction stories about the movies, the best known being "The Revelations of a Star's Wife."

In "Star Dust" she shows you your favorites of the screen and air through the eyes of one who knows them intimately.

Japan Serves Full Meal Before Tea Is Offered

In its early days the tea bush was called cha and in early English writings is referred to variously as cha, tcha and chaw and later is called tay and tee. Oddly enough, states a writer in Pathfinder Magazine, the tea shrub belongs to the plant family known as theacae. From the name cha is also derived chanyu, the Japanese word for a time honored institution, the tea ceremony, rooted in the principles of the Buddhist sect, Zen, and founded on admiration of the beautiful in daily life such as cooking, etc. This ceremony takes place in the chazeki (tea-room), which is usually about nine feet square or smaller, to suggest genteel poverty to the guest although no expense is spared in the interior. Each guest crawls into the room through a small door about three feet square and finds an alcove filled with expensive ornaments and a fireplace for steeping tea sunk into the floor.

According to the rules of best Japanese etiquette a full meal is served before the pouring and drinking of the tea. This custom was founded under the Shogun Yoshimasa about the middle of the Fifteenth century and still flourishes among those who remain faithful to and cherish the old spirit of Japan.

What Does America Ask of Congress?

By RAYMOND PITCAIRN
National Chairman
Sentinels of the Republic

With the new year comes a new session of Congress. What does the average American ask of it?

Basically his demands are modest—and few. All are in conformity with the rights and powers granted him under the Constitution.

He wants those rights respected and preserved.

He wants his collective interests, as a worker, an earner and a taxpayer, considered above and ahead of the demands of organized minorities operating as political pressure groups.

He wants his national Legislators to exhibit those qualities of responsibility and self-reliance expected of the chosen representatives of a free people. He has seen enough of rubber-stamp Congresses, eager and willing to enact hasty measures at the behest of appointed bureau chiefs, in whose selection the voters have no choice and over whose actions they exercise no control.

He wants Congress to know and respect the Federal Constitution—to refrain from legislation which violates our Fundamental Law and its Bill of Rights.

He wants Congress to remember that public debts created by reckless expenditures and waste must be paid out of taxes—clipped from the worker's earnings or the earnings of his children and grandchildren. He wants it to stop mortgaging our future.

He wants members of Congress, whatever their party affiliations, to think of the Nation as a whole, rather than in terms of political groups and factions.

In brief, he wants courage, reason and economy in government—and he asks Congress to assure these things. It is a fair request. If the members of Congress will heed it, they can do much to restore that public confidence upon which depends not only our national recovery, but the future security of America.

Motorists Reduce Accidents By Testing for Monoxide Gas

Each year the deadly traffic toll reaches new figures for highway accidents. This is the second of a series of articles to combat a new enemy, carbon monoxide gas, more deadly and insidious than any gas employed in warfare.

By L. T. WHITE
Highway Safety Expert

The average motorist, when reminded of the dangers of carbon monoxide, scoffs and remarks he never starts his automobile with his garage doors closed. He does not realize that despite his brakes, good tires, good motor and good driving, his life may be in constant danger on the road because of carbon monoxide.

In every ten accidents last year occurred when cars drove off roadways, killing more than 35,000 and injuring more than a million persons. Without doubt many of these cars left the road because the driver was stupefied by carbon monoxide gas.

Science has developed a Power Prover, which quickly indicates how much wasted fuel is pouring from your exhaust pipe and whether your car is in the danger zone of excessive carbon monoxide. A tuning routine by specially developed equipment will eliminate this danger.

Motorists are urged to have plenty of fresh air in their cars at all times. Ventilate enclosed cars from the front, so there will be a flowing air current at all times. If a driver develops drowsiness or a sudden headache, he should stop his car for five minutes and fill his lungs with fresh air. Do not hesitate to do this, for carbon monoxide gives little warning, but strikes as suddenly as a knockout blow to the jaw.

Take proper precautions; check your car at frequent intervals; tell your friends of their worst driving enemy—carbon monoxide!

THE OLD YEAR AND THE NEW

Mrs. E. M. Brown, North Newry

Mark! the Old Year is dying, and its moans are sad to hear,
But the New Year is replying, "I am coming, I am near."
Mourn not for the past. Press forward, Ever keeping step with time, ever hoping,
Trusting, praying, shouting loud,
"The victory's mine."

Dear Old Year, thou art a treasure,
Though thou comest not again
With thee thou hast brought much pleasure,
With thee thou brought many a pain.

We know not what the New Year brings us,
No! Nor would we if we could.
We can only hope for blessings
For we know the Lord is good.

Good bye, Old Year, welcome New Year,
Each in turn we hold most dear.
Yet ere we have time to love thee,
Thou dost swiftly disappear.

WINTER BIRDS

L. S. Ferris

We don't know why they come to us
When snow is piled so high—
When frozen lakes and ice bound streams
Are gray beneath the sky.

We don't know why they come and stay
While freezing tempests blow,
And every night the temperature in ten degrees below.

Mockbirds and sparrows hop across
The snow banks in our yard
And eat the crumbs we place for them
On ice cakes frozen hard.
And now and then in some cold group
A robin redbreast shows
His bird contempt for stiffened wings
And, maybe, frozen toes.

We don't know why this springtime bird
Comes back when all is drear
But in the wintertime in Maine we See the robin here.
Perhaps they know and sympathize,
And come here just to cheer
The "frozen turnips" that we are at this time of the year.

HAVING FAITH

Ralph Waldo Emerson

Some of your hurts you have cured,
And the sharpest you still have survived;
But what torment of grief you endured
From evils which never arrived.

Let tomorrow take care of tomorrow,
Leave the things of the future alone,
What's the use to anticipate sorrow?
Life's troubles come ever too soon.

Have faith and thy faith shall sustain thee,
Permit not suspicion or care
With invisible bonds to enchain thee,
But bear what God gives thee to bear.

By His spirit supported and gladdened,
Be never by foreboding deterred,
But think how oft hearts have been saddened
By fear of what never occurred.

Let tomorrow take care of tomorrow,
Shout and dash as our life may appear,
We may make it still darker by Doubt chambered by folly and fear.

Half our troubles are half our inventions,
And how often from blessings conferred
Have we shrunk in the mild apprehensions
Of evils that never occurred?

Why do we seek the trials of life
With such sad and grave persistance,
And look and wait for a crowd of life
That does not exist?

Although the today is all that we need,
For no day ever will see tomorrow,
When a census the sorrow will be today.
With its resources of joy or woe.

Bedlington Terrier Is

Smart, Scrappy, Loyal

Contrary to popular belief the Bedlington terrier is not the result of a misalliance between a sheep and a sheep dog. The story is that the Bedlington terrier is a cross between the Dandie Dinmont terrier and the otterhound. He combines the latter's love of water and scenting ability with the former's gameness, intelligence and loyalty. writes H. R. Tynan in the Washington Star.

Where he gets his scrappy disposition and fierce jealousy, both utterly belied by his lamblike appearance, is unknown. The Bedlington terrier is a longer legged dog than most terriers, only slightly smaller than the alreadale. Unlike most dogs, his breed standard calls for a flat sided, narrow-chested dog, but one that gives an impression of muscular strength. Most show Bedlingtons are blue, but sandy, tan and liver colored are also admitted. All should have pale topknots.

It is the pale, silky topknot, inherited from its Dandie forbears, that gives the Bedlington its sheep-like air. This is further enhanced by the smooth, long jaw formation and this, sparsely clad tail.

Exploring Earth's Crust

Aids in Geological Work

Within recent years there have been developed a number of geophysical methods for exploring the earth's crust. They are by no means complete in themselves, but are quite valuable as refinements for the geologic methods. They are based upon the fact that while earth cannot penetrate the ground and enable us to see what is below, the rocks are easily penetrated by other radiations, such as sound and electrical and magnetic forces.

These methods are especially valuable in prospecting for oil or sulphur, writes Thomas M. Beck in the Chicago Tribune, because of the peculiar manner in which these two materials occur. Oil, being a liquid, occurs in porous quantities only where it is bottled up, geologically speaking. That is, it is nearly always found in layers of porous sandstone, along with salt water, lying between layers of nonporous limestone which keep it from leaking away. These layers are absorbing and store oil in lighter than water, the oil collects in pools in the uppermost part of the sandstone layer, which may be an anhydrite (an inverted V-shaped fold) or a fault.

SUCCESSFUL CHRISTMAS PARTY

The Grange is an organization which aids in community welfare. It is especially interested in the Christian organization of young people. This however was fulfilled to the letter when the Bear River Grange at Newry Corner very willingly allowed the Junior Guild to have their Grange Hall at a very low figure. We feel very sorry that we were flatly refused the Grange Hall in our home town. Nevertheless our holiday dance was a grand success, thanks to the Grange at Newry.

HERE AND THERE IN MAINE

By the will of Miss Grace F. Kelley, who died recently in Boston, $100,000 was left to the Eastern Maine General Hospital at Bangor, and $5,000 to the poor and needy in Bangor, Maine.

State police reported last week 63 persons killed and 1,028 injured in 1,179 accidents in Maine in 1935. The steamer Belfast of the Eastern Steamship Lines tied up at a Boston wharf Saturday on completing its run from Winterport, ending over a hundred years of steamship service between Boston and Maine ports. Steadily declining freight and passenger traffic has forced this move, which has the sanction of the Maine Public Utilities Commission.

Lamont and Frank Sinnett, father and son, Cape Porpoise fishermen, were located by a Coast Guard seaplane Saturday afternoon near Jeffries Ledge, 45 miles from Cape Porpoise. They had been missing since Christmas day. They were brought to Portland by Coast Guard cutter Antietam. The men had been without food three days.

Frank L. Dorr, a native of Oxford and head of Raymond's store in Boston for 20 years, passed away Friday.

Delmont Telford, 12 year old son of Mr. and Mrs. Arthur Telford of Waterville, was killed at a crossing there Saturday as he pushed his rabbit hound from the track in front of a passenger train.

Judge Harry M. Shaw of the Norway Municipal Court was re-appointed by Governor Brann Saturday.

The two railroad crossings on the Grand Trunk in Oxford on Fore Street will be eliminated by building over a mile and a half of road. The new work will start near the new cement bridge on the A. D. Cummings place and join the present highway below the Dwinall crossing near the road to Oxford village. These crossings have been scenes of many accidents and several fatalities. Work has begun and will continue during the winter. The contractor is the Bridge Construction Co. of Augusta.

"God," is the subject of the Lesson-Sermon which will be read in all Churches of Christ, Scientist, on Sunday, January 5.

The Golden Text is: "Among the gods there is none like unto thee, O Lord;... For thou art great, and doest wondrous things: thou art God alone." (Psalms 86:8, 10).

Among the citations from the Bible are the following: "And Moses said to God, Behold, when I come unto the children of Israel, and shall say unto them, The God of your fathers hath sent me unto you; and they shall say to me, What is his name? What shall I say unto them?" (Exodus 3:13).

The Lesson-Sermon also includes the following passage from the Christian Science textbook: "Science and Health with Key to the Scriptures" by Mary Baker Eddy: "God is what the Scriptures declare Him to be.—Life, Truth, Love. Spirit is divine Principle, and divine Principle is Love, and Love and Mind is not both good for God is Mind; therefore in reality one mind only, there is one God." (Page 32).

Testimonial meeting first Tuesday evening of every month, 7.30, until the first of May.

All 5 States Be Next Under Wing of Nippon?

Twenty-five counties of the province of Hopel, in North China, on November 23 declared themselves disengaged from the central Chinese government at Nanking, and set up autonomous, or independent, government under the leadership of Wang Jue-keung, commissioner of the Hsiao-chang-chang demilitarized zone. The 25 counties aggregate approximately 8,000 square miles and are inhabited by 400 people.

Lin Ju-keng government, it ferred, will prove to be the effective culmination of an "autonomy" movement that may under its wing the five provinces of North China, namely Hopei, Szechuan, Suiyuan, Shansi and Shan-xi. Such autonomy for these provinces would mean the complete isolation of the Chiang Kai-shek district north of the Yellow river from the rest of the country.
Even so, it would probably not be the spread of the rapidly advancing Japanese empire further into the Asiatic continent until Japan has complete control on the continent that will be extended over an area approximately the size of the present China would become little more than another Manchukuo.

the average observer and generally to the Nanking government. The "autonomy" movement is purely a Japanese project. Yin Ju-keng is praised for his willingness to "cooperate" with Japanese military interests. His wife is a Japanese. Chinese army officials have been accused to have been fostering the autonomy movement secretly for many months. Only in the past few days Maj. Gen. Kenji Doihara, of the Japanese army Intelligence Division, and famed as the "emperor" of the "land of the rising sun," has arrived on the scene and apparently worked for the successful autonomy of the five provinces. It is certain that he will not be satisfied with a victory only in the counties of one province. And the Japanese army has backed him up to the extent of warning General Katsukawa not to interfere.

Quirks of Japanese Politics.

It is, of course, true that Tokyo has insisted that Dohara is oversteering his authority, and that Japanese troops have been mobilized only in these provinces only to protect communications and maintain order in the face of any Chinese or communist uprising. However, it is customary for the far left in Japanese politics to exaggerate the aggressive, with the result that the mild objection of the civil government as something of a bludgeon appears the injury felt by the nations who have interests in the area where the Japanese empire is extending.

It is known that in Peking a partial autonomy demonstration has been instigated by the Japanese. One of the most spectacular demonstrations was in the latest and was staged by 300 members of the famed Chinese "Gare-t" army, many of them wearing uniforms closely resembling those of the Japanese army. They wore their uniforms in their be-quarters in a lecture hall afterwards—for the Japanese soldiers to collect. On occasions handbills exhorting the populace to revolt in favor of an autonomous government have floated to earth under the roar of airplanes—which could only have been Japanese. Japanese soldiers have constantly moved inland, even through the Great Wall of China, to make sure that no railroad cars will be allowed to pass to the south where they might be loaded with troops of the Nanking government and returned. Nipponese army officials have confiscated Chinese school books and removed from them passages which might be construed as anti-Japanese. And these same officials have repeatedly been accused of hiring professional cordingly, at a nod from Japanese officials in Tientsin or Peiping. Chinese officials comply. Two outstanding examples of this were the recent retirement of the mayor of Peiping, known to oppose the autonomy movement, and the return of Chinese Minister of War Ho Ying-chin from Peiping to Nanking, both at the suggestion of the Japanese officials.

Nanking's protests to Tokyo are ignored because of Japan's insistence that the autonomy movement is strictly of Chinese origin. Yet it is known that in all of these autonomous governments planned, the administrations will have to be decidedly pro-Japanese.

That the government of Yin Ju-keng in Hopel is to be the model provinces to form an autonomous state.

What Japan Wants.

What does all this "autonomy" business mean for Japan, for Nanking China and the rest of the world? For Japan it means political economic and industrial control of another great slice of territory that once belonged to China. There is much cotton in Hopei and opportunity for planting more, to take the place of cotton that Japan must now import from the United States and from India. There is iron ore and coal, vastly important in building the naval parity which Japan is demanding from Great Britain and the United States, although not enough iron and coal, according to research scientists, to warrant the tion conference in 1922, was formed as the organic international law to apply to all future controversies in the Far East. All of the signatories are bound to respect not only the sovereignty and territorial integrity of China, but the administrative integrity as well. Secretary Hull claims that this provision is directly involved at the present time, because "an effort is being made to bring about a substantial change in the political status and condition of several of China's northern provinces."

Other provisions of the treaty bind the signatories not to support any agreements designed to create "spheres of influence" for their nationals. And still another requires them not to seek "any arrangement which might purport to establish in favor of their interests any general superiority of rights with respect to commercial or economic development of any designated region of China."

Claim Treaty Was Misnomer.

Japan's claim is that such a thing as the territorial and administrative integrity of China never existed.

Political economists believe that the best any central Chinese government ever will do is administer a part of China. Much of what is known as China is poorer than even the heavily populated cities, even though its population is comparatively sparse. In five of the northwestern provinces, which make up 29 per cent of the total area, there is only 5 per cent of the population and because of the poor quality of the land this population is difficult to support.

Also, much of China is too backward to be governed well. For instance, there is the province of Szechuen; it has 50,000,000 inhabitants and not a single mile of railroad!

The Communist threat is always present, the Communist army in China having been estimated at 100,000. But the Communists have virtually passed as a political party to be reckoned with as they were before the downfall of their leader, Borodin, in 1927, when Gen. Chiang Kai-shek's Kuomintang party became the ruling power.

Since Baron Pempou Alost Italy pointed out to the League Nations council at Geneva the inconsistency of applying sanctions to Italy in the Ethiopian incident and not applying them to Japan, the North China and Manchurian

the North China and indeed to Manchurian inlets, many a parallel has been drawn between the two. There are too great differences that destroy the parallel, however.
Nippon is subtle.

For one thing Japan has been much more subtle aggressor against China than first was granted the credit. Japan has effected the subversion of Chinese army leaders before invading and after.

Another difference is that Chile has not appealed to the league yet whereas Halls-Schelske's appeal was loud, long and unmistakable.

Meanwhile the conquest of the Japanese empire becomes clear and clearer. Pusan and Fusan in 1905; Port Arthur in 1904; Karafuto in 1905; Korea in 1910; mandates over the Pacific Island north of the equator in 1919; a puppet state of Manchuria in 1931. Total added to it in 1941. Are I not to be the puppet state? Hoped China, Myanmar, Siam and Shanung.²⁰

● 5월 2주(5월 14일 ~ 5월 20일)

This scene at Tientsin in 1932 is being re-enacted as Japanese troops are being massed in North China, where it is expected they will be used to enforce the declaration of "autonomous" governments in five provinces. Armored trains, such as the one shown at left above, have carried the troops inland. In the insets at right are shown the Japanese General, Prince Arima, and Gen. Chiang Kalshek, the Chinese dictator.

(Chinese agitators (at 40 to 60 cents a day) to stir up trouble.

The Japanese claim is that the autonomous movement is a natural one entirely founded and furthered by the Chinese in the provinces involved. They point out that the Nanking rule drains these already poverty-stricken people by excessive taxes, and at the same time gives them little or no benefit. But the Chinese people in the territory literally do not know what it is all about. They are confused, bewildered. Like Chinese everywhere, they have no interest in politics. That, indeed, has been the stumbling block in the path of the Chiang Kai-shek's attempt to unite China under one government. To the educated Chinese, an "autonomous" movement is a joke.

Chinese Do Nippon's Bidding.

Yet Nanjing's hands are not tied. While there are not enough Japanese troops in North China today to enforce the rule of Japan's army chiefs, Nanjing knows that troops could—and would—be speedily dispatched from Korea or Japan itself to meet any emergency. As for other pro-Japanese autonomies to come is apparent from his declaration:

"From today the demilitarized zone will be separated from the central government and will institute and carry out an autonomous regime as the first voice of a federation of provinces with a view toward maintaining peace in eastern Asia.

"We, the undersigned, hope that the people, the public organs and the military and political leaders of the various provinces will rise up with us to suppress the criminals and arch-enemies of the nation, to draft a constitution, and choose wise and able men for the administration of the country."

This is directly in line with the program devised for the five North China provinces by Dolhara, the "emperor builder." And only a few days after the proclamation, General Sun Chieh-yuan, commissioner of the Chinese garrison at Peking Tientsin, upon whom Dolhara is known to have exerted extreme pressure, circulated a telegram proclaiming the intention of Honan and Chihai expense and the responsibility of complete Japanese conquest and government of North China.

Such a complete subjection would undoubtedly be ruinous to Japan already financially burdened as she is. Much better to allow these North China provinces to govern themselves, under the "protecting" wing of the Japanese army of occupation, with free trade privileges for Tokyo.

Great Britain, the United States and other powers would be far more seriously hurt commercially by the establishment of a "Manchukuo of North China" than they were by the establishment of the present Manchukuan rule itself, for their commercial interests in North China are much greater. As a result, Secretary of State Hull and Sir Samuel Hoare, British minister of foreign affairs, simultaneously demanded Japanese explanation of apparent violations of the Nine Power treaty which guarantees the territorial integrity of China. That treaty, signed by the nine leading powers of the world, with the exception of Russia, at the Washington

Long moment Lillith Ramill sat. She looked down at her fattered sports suit, at smeared hands and broken shoes. The dimmed glitter of the engagement ring held her gaze. It passed to her foxskin leggings and moccasins.
"Of course, when they can cash their checks at the bank, I'll throw them away," she murmured. "Dirty things. Certainly has put us out of the woods. And more to the point, you still have Vivian's pistol." He asked me for it. Said that the less I carried, the better for me.

He asked me for it. Said that the less I carried, the better for me. "Is criminal?" he asked. "You're serving alcohol without a license?" "I do not need one," she said. "Because like I said, I'm a private home and not a public house. You must ask him to back the pistol."

He fastened it to the bank with a line made from the trimmings of the moose hides. For anchor he used the wolfskin knapsack with its weight of platinum alloy.

"May as well make it useful," he met Huxby's look of moody protest. "You are to have the bow seat, and so can continue to guard my 60 per cent, along with—"

A clap of thunder and the swish of a wind gust through the birch tops checked Garth's banter. He spoke a quick order: "Leanto the blanket on that knoll between the trees, front this way."

A glance at the onrushing black clouds of the thunderstorm sent even Huxby hurrying to help the others. While they tied the upper corners of the blanket with rawhide thongs and weighted the back edge with logs, Garth pulled the canoe ashore and placed it bottom up over the smoke racks.

When, three hours later, the crashing thunderstorm passed over and the heavy downpour of rain ceased, all the party were wet from the drip through the blanket. But the fire still smoldered and the half-smoked meat was dry under the canoe.

"Had you been used to canoeing," Garth said, "we need not have lost all this time. But you'll get enough drenchings later on. Wring out the blanket and fetch the meat."

He launched the canoe again, unaided, and directed the others to their places. All had to kneel, facing the narrower prow of the double-stemmed craft. First came Huxby, with his wolfskin treasure bag for knee-pad. Lillith knelt on the front part of the lengthwise folded blanket. Her father had the end of the blanket behind her. At the wobble of the unsteady craft, he squatted back on his heels and clutched the gunwales.

The others held to willow branches while Garth loaded in the meat behind his own place. He stepped aboard and began to paddle with a steady stroke that sent the canoe gliding out into the swamp stream.

A paddle lay beside each of the others. Lillith was first to dip hers overside. At a murmured word from her, Huxby followed suit. Both of them had done a bit of amateur canoeing at the fashionable beaches. They were able to start in at once and help a little. But two days passed before Mr. Ramill gained enough balance and assurance to rise on his knees and try stroking his paddle.

Even after this, Garth had to bear the brunt of the heavy work. Much of the time the others were forced to stop off, to get the cramp out of their knees or rest their arms.

Had work been the only consideration, he would as soon have done it all. There were, however, reasons for more speed than he could make alone with the heavily loaded skin-covered craft. The summer was now far along. The days were rapidly shortening, the nights becoming colder and darker.

Delay would mean a serious chance of being caught in early autumn blizzards. Even Lillith Ramill might not be able to survive an all-day drive of sleet. Such a storm would undoubtedly kill her father and, not improbably, Huxby also. Persistent use of the paddles would continue the toughening of the three cheechahoes.

On the third day Lillith attempted to keep stroke with him. She paddled until so exhausted that she broke down and wept.

They had twice camped on muskeg. The third afternoon brought them to broken ridges where the stream dashed through a gorge. So far as could be seen, the rapids looked easy to shoot. But Garth said it was a portage

He slung a pack from his tump-line and took the canoe on his shoulders. The total load was a full two hundred and fifty pounds. At sight of it, the others took on all the rest of the meat and equipment. For miles Garth led them up and down rocky slopes, through brush and bogs. Twice they skirted sheer falls that showed why he had taken to land.

At last, below the lower fall, he launched the canoe in the eddy of a deep pool. The others sank down on the bank, outspent. He built a fire and boiled tea for them. They expected to camp overnight. He ordered them back into the canoe.

"Can't chance waiting here. May be too foggy to see tomorrow," he explained. "Sit flat in the bottom, and keep your paddles inboard."

They understood when a few strokes of his paddle brought the canoe to the foot of the pool. For a long two miles they crouched low in the bottom while the frail craft glanced down the foaming, swirling torrent of white water.

At the foot of the rapids, he headed it alongside a bit of gravelly beach and helped Mr. Ramill and Lillith ashore. When he remarked that there was gold in the gravel, Huxby nearly upset the canoe in his haste to get out and look.

"Gold! Why didn't we bring the gold pan?"

Garth laughed and stretched out on the dry grass above the gravel.

"Squaw! She murmured. 'Dirty Squaw!'"

"Gallant gentleman, your lady is building the fire."

"Don't mind him, Vivian," Lillith chimed in on the banter. "You can use the cup for panning. I need only the pot to boil Alan's tea."

Huxby glanced sidelong at Garth and hastened to help the girl. Her father had flattened out beside Garth. With a yawn, Garth stretched up his arms and let them fall. The left one came down across the millionaire's body. The back of the hand felt a lump under the leather coat. Huxby had not again gained possession of the pistol.

The cheechahoes had now experienced the different phases of canoeing—days of paddling through muskeg, a portage, and the running of rapids. But all proved to be no more than a mild sample of the difficulties and hardships that followed. In the next two weeks three more rapids had to be shot and two very hard portages made. Between times, the canoe was paddled interminably through meandering channels that twisted and looped and split off in blind leads.

Down in the lower country, the pests of black gnats, mosquitoes and stinging flies became worse. At the same time the flask of grease and pitch dope began to give out. Most of the camps were on wet ground. For days the party were drenched by a steady drizzle, varied only by downpours that kept Lillith and her father bailing the canoe.

Several times fog on the water compelled Garth to put ashore. Without sight, even his training could not enable him to follow the right channel. He was not an Indian. But between the forced halts, he put in still longer hours of paddling.

Matters were coming to a pinch. After the first wetting by the rain, what remained of the meat spoiled. It became so flyblown and tainted that Lillith threw it away before Garth could prevent the wastage. He decided to give them all another lesson.

In the fast that followed, Mr. Ramill was the first to fall. Huxby came next; Lillith last of the three. By the third day they had given up all paddling. On the fourth, they lay slumped in the bottom of the canoe. Garth only tightened his belt again and dipped his paddle in his strong, steady, seemingly tireless stroke.

Whenever he found himself nearing his limit, he headed ashore, boiled tea, slept, and then put off again. The fifth day began to draw on the last reserve of his wily endurance. Towards noon he made the boggy shore, almost outspent. He dragged out the wolfskin knapsack anchor, with its load of platinum alloy. The girl and the two men lay in a stupor of starvation. He himself was so tired that he could not have lifted even Lillith ashore.

As he rested on the wet sedges he recalled the place as one of his former camp sites. A spruce-covered ridge of higher ground here thrust out into the muskeg. The first remembrance brought another. The second gave him strength to pull his rifle from the canoe and climb aslant the ridge end. There was a berry patch on the east slope. The fruit would be better than nothing. He hoped, however, for something more.

Circling to get the wind in his face, he crept through the spruce thickets until he could peer out on the open ground of the berry patch. Luck was with him. The old black bear had gone off and left her cub. He rested the rifle barrel on a spruce branch to get sure aim.

That was the end of famine. Gorged upon the fat, tender meat of the bear cub, even Mr. Ramill rapidly regained strength. He was still rather weak, however, when they came to the last portage.

The approach to solid ground was across a narrow belt of muskeg. Near the far side of the swamp, the millionaire failed to jump squarely upon a tussock of niggerhead grass. He slipped and plunged headfirst into a pool.

Huxby was following close behind, alert for every move of his partner. He sprang to grasp the feet of the sinking man. A heave dragged him out, slimed and spluttering. Huxby worked over him, scraping off mud, until Lillith hastened back to help assist her father across the rest of the quagmire. Once on firm ground, the millionaire joked about his mishap.

"Haven't had a bath since the last rain," he said. "This one is higher class—equal to the mud baths at Hot Springs. How about my pack, Lillith?"

She looked in his foxskin bag. "Everything there, Dad—with some mud added."

Garth had been too far ahead, with his heavy pack and canoe, to see or hear the accident. Mr. Ramill joked again about his extra bath when they took to the canoe at the far side of the portage. But all the time until they reached the evening camp and he started to wash the mud from the leather coat, he did not notice that the pistol was missing.

At the announcement of the loss, Huxby met Garth's gaze with a stare of cold hostility. Garth walked up to him, empty-handed.

"If you've done what I think you have," he said, "I will join you for a show down."

The engineer's lips tightened in an ironical smile. He put up his hands. Not to be fooled by the seeming bluff, Garth went over Huxby's tattered clothes, from coat collar to moccasins. The pistol was nowhere on the engineer.

"This is one time I'm due to apologize," Garth admitted.

"I accept no apology from you," Huxby replied.

Lillith looked from one to the other, her own lips tightened.

CHAPTER VII

The Gaffed Wolf.

MR. RAMILL'S good-humor over his fall into the muskeg pool had not been forced. It was based upon his feeling of physical well-being.

Instead of having been broken down by the hard toil and exposure of the trip and that severe lesson in the meaning of famine, he had come through it all in even better shape than before the start from the lost valley. The days of starvation had completed Nature's raid upon the degenerate fats and poisons of his once obese body.

There had followed the feasts of tender bear-cub meat. He was again putting on weight, but it was hard muscle.

He was paddling as vigorously if not as skillfully as his daughter, when, mid-morning of the twenty-fourth day from the valley, the canoe neared a wooded point that rose well above the swamps. Garth called out from the stern of the canoe:

"If you want a surprise, friends, shut your eyes while we take 10 strokes."

He knew that Huxby would keep on staring ahead. But he guessed right about Lillith and her father. At the end of the tenth stroke, the girl flung up her paddle and uttered a shriek of joyous amazement:

"The river! The river!"

Close upon the cry came the deep-lunged shout of her father: "By the Almighty, you've done it, Garth! We're out."

Huxby continued to stare fixedly ahead at the mighty flood of the Mackenzie. He was the last to speak: "Out of the muskegs; but a long way from out of this d-d North!"

"Long by canoe or even by steam-er," Garth agreed. "Not so far, though, by air passage. We can make the emergency supply post by two or three hours' paddling downstream."

"What of it? That fellow Tobin told us planes never stop there, unless foul weather runs them short of gas."

Garth met the suddenly anxious looks of Lillith and her father with a smile.

"All pilots have orders to sight and stop posts in passing. Tobin has a distress signal. There'll be a plane coming south from the Arctic coast within three days—probably tomorrow. You'll be lying in the lap of luxury at Edmonton within a week or 10 days."

The millionaire felt at the grease-and-pitch mat of his mouth and beard. He chuckled. "A bath and a barber! Hand over that last cigar, Garth. Here's where I celebrate."

He opened the gold-mounted case, bit off the tip of the sole surviving Havana, and snipped his patent lighter. It failed to light. He tossed it over into the water, and turned to Garth, with an impatient command: "Give me a light."

"Only two matches left, sir."

"Enough to light a cigar. Pass them over."

Theories About Cain's Wife
There are various theories about Cain's wife. Some scholars of the Bible claim Adam and Eve were not the first persons on earth but only the first named persons. Others regard the story of Cain as a composite of several traditions relating to different non-biblical Cain who lived at different periods. Others suggest that Cain was a more distant relative. The Bible, Chapter 4, verse 14, tends to support the first of these theories. —Detroit News.

STAR DUST

MOVIE AND RADIO

By VIRGINIA VALE

PICTURE the delight of the huge audience at a hockey game between a New York team and one from Montreal the other evening, when Joe E. Brown threw in the puck to start the game. He looked very small and very thin—much smaller than he does on the screen—like a contrast with the burly hockey players. And he clowned a bit when he hastened off the ice.

Pat O'Brien, who was with him, threw the little rubber disc down between two players at the beginning of the second period. He looked big enough to play hockey himself. In fact, friend Pat is getting a bit heavy. Brown gave the spectators a chance to see a perfectly happy human being. It was a small boy who went to him during one of the intermissions, to shake hands. Brown held his hand a long time and visited with him, and afterward the youngster lingered in the aisle, unable to tear himself away from the idol who had been so kind to him.

Did you tune in your radio on the broadcast that opened the new NBC studio in Hollywood? There certainly were plenty of celebrities on the air—but as for me, I liked Mary Livingston's goofy poem best of anything I heard. And reflect a moment on the fact that the master of ceremonies was Al Jolson, who at such a time making a success of broadcasting. He was determined to master the new medium, and he did, but what a battle! I doubt if anyone ever worked harder than Alon did in those first broadcasting days of his; watching him work, you found yourself pulling for him with all your heart. Well, that persistence of his has carried him a long way.

It's too bad, in a way, that "Barbary Coast" and "Frisco Kid" came along at the same time. One has Miriam Hopkins as the star, the other has James Cagney, but these two stories of early days in San Francisco are too much alike; in fact, they might be two versions of the same story.

Everyone is wondering how southerners will like "So Red the Rose." After all, they're the only ones who can really pass judgment on it. And certainly they won't make the mistake that one New York reviewer did. He said that the only authentic Southern accent belonged to Walter Connolly—when, as a matter of fact, both Margaret Sullivan and Randolph Scott, the heroine and the hero, hail from Virginia.

Don't miss Lily Pons' first picture, "I Dream Too Much." RKO certainly picked a winner when Miss Pons was selected as their operatic star, after Grace Moore's success sent all the big companies scurrying around after girls with reputations as singers. Lily Pons doesn't just sing. She shows an amazing talent for comedy. She's not pretty, yet she has moments of looking very much like Lupe Velez. And she makes her love scenes with Henry Fonda very convincing. Eric Blore and his trained seal add not a little to the general hilarity, and what with one thing and another the picture's a riot.

Some day two motion picture people are going to get engaged without first denying all romantic interest in each other—but not, I fear, in my time! Jackie Coogan and Betty Grable ran true to form, declaring that they were not in love with each other—oh, not at all! They were just good friends—Hollywood people insist that they're "just good friends" when they're secretly engaged and when they're getting a divorce, with fine impartiality. And, of course, right on the heels of all the vehement denials, came the announcement of their engagement.

their scenes in "The Country Doctor." Naturally, everybody's one thought was for the babies. So when Jean Hersholt, who plays Dr. Dattoe in the picture, went walking, slipped on the ice, and acquired a badly bruised leg, nobody was much disturbed. It looks as if we wouldn't see anyone in the roles of the father and mother of the babies. According to report, they were offered $700 if they'd sign papers allowing themselves to be impersonated, and refused; not enough money.

They do say that this is a good way to make sales, if you're a jeweler. A Los Angeles firm sent one million dollars' worth of gems to the Paramount lot (well, about a million dollars' worth) to be used in the filming of the new Dietrich picture, "Desire." That's because fake jewels don't photograph like real ones, you know. But very little of the jewelry went back to the store—Mae West, Marlene, Jan Klempura and Gladys Swarthout bought most of it.

Gangster pictures may be a thing of the past, as we've been told over and over again, but they keep bobbing up in some form or other every little while—and they always break records at the theaters where they're shown, it seems to me. The latest is "Show Them No Mercy," HARRIETT stirred. She was uncomfortable. She despised this southbound train. Who wanted to live in Oklahoma, anyway! Darn it, she did love Bill. If he would only work at something besides oil.

"Sha-a-tuck!" called Conductor Williams. He had two Shatuck passengers, both young ladies. He surmised that they were probably school teachers.

"Station is closed but there is a taxi that meets this train," he told his two passengers as he lifted their bags to the platform.

"Is there a hotel here?" Harriett asked.

The conductor had swung back up the steps of the moving train. The other passenger, a slender, taller girl, answered her. "There's a sort of a hotel. That's where I'm going. Come along with me if you wish."

The hotel was a wooden structure. There was a drop light with a ghastly green shade hanging above an ugly brown desk. A large ledger marked "Clarion Register" lay open. A small ear was tacked beside a bell. It read, "Ring bell for clerk." Harriett pushed the white button. They heard a bell jangling somewhere in the back and the springs of a bed creaked loudly. A baldish man wearing a flannel nightshirt, gray robe and shoes came down the stairs.

They carried their bags up the stairs and were shown into a room on the left of a hallway. Harriett locked the door and dropped onto the closest bed.

"Don't be frightened," the other girl told her. "I've stayed here before. We're perfectly safe. By the way, I'm Polly Gramam and I'm on my way down to Pleasant Hill to visit my brother."

Harriett, unpacking her bag, repeated to herself "Gramam." She knew, Gramam was the friend of Bill's who had opened up this terrible job.

"I'm really so excited," Polly went on. "I'm in love with one of the fellows who works with my brother."

"Oh!" Harriett's mind and heart were doing somersaults.

"He's a dream really. I've been in love with him since I was eleven years old," Polly went, not looking at Harriett. Harriett remembered a flash that this Graham friend

An entire Egyptian city, built 3,300 years before the birth of Christ, for the first time in history has been laid bare in all the splendor of its careful town planning. It was built between Cairo and Luxor by the great Pharaoh Akhenaten who here tried to rid the Egyptian religion of its abuses.

But the city, with its processional way, coronation hall, and temple of the shining spirit, lasted no more than ten years, passing with its founder. what Irvin S. Cobb thinks about:

What They Want to Read. CULVER CITY, CALIF.

Beautiful actress mysteriously dead. Crazy worker turns peaceful street into a shambles. Mother of three hanged for murder. Nurse suspected of inflicting "mercy deaths" on helpless patients. Confession by Hauptmann predicted. Rich man's son kidnapped. Former President Hoover tries to make humorous speech.

Irvin S. Cobb

All these tragic things on the same front page. Earnest thinkers who'll accuse the newspapers of sensationalism for featuring distressful happenings, forget that, to 115, newspapers must print what people want to read about, not what professional uplifters and most publishers, and many editors, would like them to read. To publish any other sort of newspaper for popular consumption would require an endowment fund bigger than the average reformer's ignorance of human nature.

Extra: In the excitement, one more saddening headline almost was overlooked: Governor Talmadge of Georgia still thinks he's running for President.

The Living Dead.

Doctor Carrel is a bit late with his theory that human beings might be dried out and filed away for a matter of 200 years or so, and then brought back to life again. Only the other night I was speaking at a dinner where there were many who must have undergone the process—only they hadn't been brought back to life yet.

It used to be that I had better results, talking at banquets. But lately my audiences and I seem to be drifting apart. Or maybe it's merely poor old Mr. Cobb that's drifting apart.

Seriously, I think it would be a mistake to dehydrate a fellow the way Doctor Carrel suggests and set him aside in some quiet ratproof place for a couple of centuries and then return him to consciousness. He probably wouldn't notice much change in radio gags—they'll still be using the same ones—but judging by the present rate of progress, think what taxes will be then.

Prospects of a Fight.

FOR a while it seemed that, when the Republicans meet next year, it would be for memorial services at Armageddon, and adjourning thence to the cemetery. Now the settled they'll meet at Cleveland and the official silver lining hangs. Chairman Fletcher, predicts it won't be any badge of sorrow either.

Also, the Democrats, who not so long ago were figuring their best to do would merely be a grand exhibition rally, replete with Parties and flags, are now inclined to go in for a regular convention, with resolutions deploring, among other things, the Literary Digest.

Well, a fight is better than a massacre. And upon the horizon of both parties looms the figure of old Joe Townsend, coming with a little plan, and if you don't think too hesitating to cast a shadow, and grant Mr. Townsend, the Ham Fish, honor for President spreads like cold molasses.

Stamps and Such.

OWING to the Christmas rush our Post office department let an entire week slip by without turning loose any special stamp commemorating somebody or something. That means a double header later.

If you're going in for new United States issues, you'd better figure on an addition to the little home. You won't be able to get your collection in an album; you'll need a bowling alley. Because, when we run out of people or places or events to name stamps for, Big Chief Farley can draw on the alphabet and still be in the fashion.

My guess is the NRA memorial stamp will be printed in black and feature a picture of Gen. Hugh Johnson standing on his head.

Peace Prize for Sale.

STICKING up their heads just long enough to announce there'd be no peace prize for 1935, the judges ducked right back into the sub-cellar.

At the moment, all was quiet and harmony. With the exceptions of one large three-ring war and several smaller ones, and riots of one or more of the standard varieties—racial, religious, political, industrial or economic—going on simultaneously in seven major cities on four continents, which comes pretty close to being almost all the continents we have.

But before withholding the award, why didn't the judges take a quick glance in the direction of Greenland? There hasn't been a harsh word out of Greenland all year.

Formation of Grand Canyon

The Grand canyon has been worn by the ceaseless flow of the silt laden Colorado river, by the storm waters that occasionally fall into the canyon, and by weathering processes. The most effective of these agencies has been the river itself. However, it has not directly carved the canyon to its full width, but cut the embayments that scallop the rims of the plateaus. It has cut its way vertically downward, maintaining its course almost without change. Meanwhile, the rocky walls of the canyon have been exposed to the destructive action of rain and silt, of frost and landslide, of wind and chemical action.

Bright Lights Affect Birds

Observations show that birds are affected by illumination. For example, on moonlit nights birds fly at a much higher altitude and, thereby, avoid collision with structures. The fact that they fly nearer the ground on dark nights is believed to indicate that they utilize the glow of artificial lights on human habitations, streets and electric signs to guide them. Just how much the death of the birds is due to use of lights as aids to flight and just how much to a sort of flameless attraction, as in the case of moths and other insects, is a matter for conjecture and further observation.

Guatemala, about as big as Louisiana, is the chief commercial country in Central America. It has a seacoast of 70 miles on the Atlantic and one of 200 miles along the Pacific.

"Flower Flag"

When the Chinese at Canton first saw the Stars and Stripes on an American ship they thought the flag as beautiful as a flower, and "flower flag" it was called for many years.

Sold Winds

In the Middle Ages the Lapins and Finns were famed for the business of selling winds to sailors and others. They would sell a cord with three knots in it, one loosed a fair wind, two a storm, and three a gale.

Steam Engines

All steam engines are really machines for turning heat energy into the energy of motion of the parts of the machine, which in turn do the work required.

Mule's Intelligence Said to Exceed Other Animals

Mules have been in every war fought anywhere on the globe. They have dragged cannon through swamps where a modern tractor would succumb to the jitters; they have led charges up mountainsides where goats would hesitate, then they have stood with one long ear forward and one backward listening to the formalities of a foe's surrender and have brayed in triumph.

Great credit has been accorded the dog, the horse, the chimpanzee, for intelligence. But don't be fooled by that, says a writer in the Kansas City Star. The dog, the horse and the chimpanzee will do a lot of foolish things under the urge of foolish humans. Not the mule! He won't drink where he should not or when he should not; he won't venture upon an unsafe bridge; he won't overeat even in a field of green corn; he knows when he has done a day's work, and he knows when the sun is too hot for safety. If he could talk and would, which we doubt, he could give world-wide advice to those who use him.

Yes, the mule is stubborn, and, just possibly, that is because he knows what he wants when he wants it, and, being unable to put it into words, he simply stands and waits until human intelligence catches on.

Picked Longest Psalm

The Covenanters, in the time of the Civil wars were exceedingly fond of singing psalms. When the great Montrose was taken prisoner, his chaplain, Wishart, the elegant historian of his deeds, shared the same fate with his patron, and was condemned to the same punishment. Being desired on the scaffold to name what psalm he wished to have sung, he selected the one hundred and nineteenth, consisting of 22 stanzas. In this he was guided by God's good providence, for before two-thirds of the psalm was sung, a pardon arrived.

Juries Are Costly

Those who favor the abolition of juries frequently point out, among other reasons, that juries are not only unreasonable, but costly. In one case in which 750 men were examined in order to get an unprejudiced panel of 12, the jury acquitted the accused in the face of the clearest evidence of murder. In another case in which 4,521 men were questioned for fitness, the jury fees amounted to $13,000.—Collier's Weekly.

The poor law of Queen Elizabeth's time, some 250 years ago, enjoined the parishes to supply the able-bodied unemployed with all kinds of raw materials for useful labor, flax, hemp, or wool for spinning and weaving, iron and timber for handicrafts, and even land for cultivation.

Composite City

Stockholm has been described as a composite of Scottish lake scenery, of the Bay of Naples, and of the islands of the Aegean. It is built on peninsulas and islands, and hundreds of boats and small steamers ply its waterways, taking its residents to and from their island homes.

One at a Time

An element of weakness in much of our reasoning is that we try to grasp too much of life at one time. We think of it as a whole, instead of taking the dice one by one. Life is a mosaic, and each tiny piece must be cut and set with skill.

Halley's Comet So Named for English Astronomer

Halley's comet was so named for Edmund Halley, English astronomer, notes the Indianapolis News. He discovered that the orbits of the comets of 1531 and 1697 were similar to that of 1682, which he himself observed, and thereupon concluded they were the same. He predicted the comet's return about 1758, and called upon posterity to record and verify his prediction. It arrived at perihelion on March 12, 1759.

Investigation showed many references to the periodic appearance throughout the Christian era. In 1535 it returned, and was next expected in 1910. While yet some 300,000,000 miles distant, it was photographed on September 11, 1909, by Professor Wolf of Heidelberg. For months afterward, it was invisible to the eye; later it developed rapidly and was a spectacular object when it reached its greatest brilliance in May, 1910.
